

Prosecution of man selling fake coronavirus cure kits

13 July 2020

Stephen Hopper instructed by the Crown Prosecution Service successfully prosecutes a man selling fake coronavirus cure kits.

Frank Ludlow, 59, was caught by City of London Police trying to send dozens of parcels of fake remedies in a post office near his West Sussex home. He pleaded guilty to selling the fake coronavirus cure kits to people in France and the United States. Ludlow was given a suspended 10-month sentence at Portsmouth Crown

Court.
